

Allie Orgen

UNODC: Topic #1 - Cross-Border Organized Crime

YUNMUN XXXIV

Cross-border organized crime presents a significant global challenge with far-reaching consequences. The illicit activities of criminal networks, which have a detrimental impact on security, human rights, and public health worldwide, include:

- Arms Trafficking: The illegal trade of firearms and ammunition fuels violence, conflict, and terrorism across borders.
- Human Trafficking: The illicit trade in human beings for forced labor, sexual exploitation, and other purposes violates fundamental human rights.
- Drug Trafficking: Illicit drug trade is a pervasive issue that transcends borders, affecting public health, security, and socioeconomic development.

Cross-border organized crime imposes grave dangers to society. The proliferation of arms fuels violent conflicts, undermining regional and global peace. Human trafficking subjects vulnerable individuals to unimaginable suffering and exploitation. Drug trafficking takes a devastating toll on public health, contributing to addiction, disease, and violence in communities. These illicit activities disrupt the social fabric, threaten security, and inhibit socioeconomic progress. By exploiting border vulnerabilities, criminal organizations and non-state actors can destabilize regions and undermine security.

While writing your position papers, please research and address the following points:

- Describe your country's current border security policies and their effectiveness in addressing cross-border organized crime. Explore the correlation between border security measures and the extent they deter or facilitate cross-border organized crime activities, such as arms, human, and drug trafficking.
- Examine the shared responsibility among countries, international organizations, and law enforcement agencies in addressing and dismantling smuggling networks. Additionally, explore the question of primary responsibility: should it lie with the country from which illicit traded materials are exiting or with the country into which they are entering?

- What policy recommendations and strategies should be implemented to counter cross-border criminal activities? What measures has your country taken? Has it been effective?
- Assess how arms, human, and drug trafficking have impacted your country. Determine if your country is primarily a destination, transit, or source for such illicit activities and the resulting consequences. Examine if your country is involved in cross-border organized crime, and if so, provide justifications for such involvement or identify steps taken to combat it.

In your research, you should not limit yourself to the topics mentioned above, as these will only be the starting point of our discussion. Make sure to explore this topic and your country in depth so you can prepare for the complicated discussions we will be having.

Please remember that you represent your country's views, not your own. In addition, you will submit all papers through Turnitin, so do not plagiarize! Please familiarize yourself with the YUNMUN handbook and procedure.

If you have any questions, please do not hesitate to email me at aorgen@mail.yu.edu. I look forward to reading your work and working with you to solve this crucial issue.

Best of luck,

Allie Orgen

Chair, UNODC

YUNMUN XXXIV